
John Burroughs Reporter

7 messages

 Wed, Aug 25, 2010 at 2:00 PM

To: ericnumis@aol.com

Hello, Mr. Newman.

Thank you for talking with me on the phone. I have drafted an article to be included in the next issue of the Reporter. Please take a look at it and feel free to edit as you think appropriate.

Also, if you have a photograph of you and Mrs. Newman or a photo of the sample banknotes, I would love to include one or the other or both with the story. It is not essential though.

Thank you for your help, and congratulations on your find. I look forward to hearing from you.

Lynn

Audubon scholars all over the world are pretty excited about Eric Newman's '28 find.

Newman has co-discovered an etching by bird artist and ornithologist John James Audubon. The discovery of the etching, which appears to be the artist's first engraved illustration, was made in collaboration with Audubon scholar, Robert Peck, who is curator of art and artifacts at the Academy of Natural Sciences. The two spent about a decade hunting for the illustration that Audubon mentioned in an 1824 diary entry. Audubon wrote that he had given a drawing of a running grouse to a Philadelphia engraver for use on a New Jersey banknote.

That reference and another a few years later convinced Audubon scholars of the existence of the illustration. But they were stumped. Where was it? Nobody could find it. Peck decided to give it one more try. He contacted Newman, who is a numismatic historian and scholar, and Newman started looking. He searched for grouse pictures, pouring over every book written on New Jersey paper money and checking thousands of banknotes issued in the United States. He didn't find any ... until he re-examined his own collection of sample sheets, which are printed with various images that bank presidents might want on their bills. There, on a sheet issued by Fairman's firm, likely in 1825, was a grouse, a running grouse!

Mr. Newman, who turns 100 in May 2011, has been writing on the history of American money for 80 years. He has authored many articles and books on the topic, and his book on early American paper money is considered the standard in the field. He also has one of the finest private collections of U.S. and colonial American coins and paper money, and his gift to Washington University in St. Louis established the Newman Money Museum.

Mr. Newman is also the man for whom the Newman Prize at Burroughs is named. The prize—which recognizes the qualities of exploration, courage and determination in a Burroughs student—honors Mr. Newman as a model of those qualities. The prize enables a Burroughs student to meet with a prominent American of his or her choice

In the case of Mr. Newman, his curiosity and lifelong love of learning have led in interesting directions. "I was told that nobody had been able to find the Audubon illustration, and I was the one who got to find it!" he says.

"Nobody is an expert on anything without digging in and learning about it. That is what my education at JBS did for me."

Lynn Phelps
Editor, Print Publications
John Burroughs School
314/993-4040

Wed, Aug 25, 2010 at 4:20 PM

EricNumis@aol.com <EricNumis@aol.com>

To: [REDACTED]

Dear Ms. Phelps:

Thank you for submitting your draft of the discovery of Audubon's grouse:

My suggestions are listed but you may discard any of them.

In line 1 please modify the last few words to; "the find of Eric P. Newman '28 " as this will be clearer.

In line 2 use "discovered " instead of "co-discovered" as I actually found it

In line 4 please add "of Philadelphia" after "Sciences" to give its full name.

In line 5 please eliminate "running".

In line 11 please add " bank note engravers" before the word "sample"

At the end of the 4th paragraph I would prefer it if you leave out the gift matter and just say "established and operates the Newman Money Museum in the Kemper Art Museum at Washington University in St. Louis".

I think it would be nice to nice if you mentioned my wife of over 70 years since she is Evelyn Edison "37 who created the St. Louis Book Fair, The Scholarshop, the Gypsy Caravan, The Butterfly House, Little Shop around the Corner, Camelot and other St. Louis charitable operations. .If you want to make her doings a separate item for the Reporter that is an option. I do not want publicity when she has done much more than I have..

We certainly enjoy your writings in the Reporter. Please feel free to send me any comments you wish or ask me any further questions.

Eric

[Quoted text hidden]

Wed, Aug 25, 2010 at 5:27 PM

To: EricNumis@aol.com

Dear Mr. Newman:

I have incorporated your changes. They were all good suggestions.

As for the mention of your wife, I think that in order to do justice to Mrs. Newman's contributions to the St. Louis community, I should write a separate story . In fact, it is long overdue. I hope she is willing, but I need to wait until the winter issue, since this issue is going to press very soon. I will do some research and contact her in October or November.

Thank you for your help on this.

Lynn

[Quoted text hidden]

=

Thu, Aug 26, 2010 at 9:37 AM

EricNumis@aol.com <EricNumis@aol.com>

To: [REDACTED]

Dear Ms. Phelps:

I agree with you that any publicity about my wife's doings will be better for a later issue. I do feel that you might mention in the Audubon article that we have been married for over 70 years because she is a graduate of JBS and helped me..

Incidentally I think that Scholarshop is going to be 50 years old in a month and is celebrating that event. It has raised millions for university scholarships and that Dorothy Lee Peltton (died long ago) who I think was JBS helped Evelyn start Scholarshop.

Thanks Eric P. Newman

[Quoted text hidden]

Thu, Aug 26, 2010 at 10:18 AM

To: EricNumis@aol.com

Dear Mr. Edison:

I like the tie-in with the 50-year anniversary of the Scholarshop. I looked for Dorothy Lee Pelton's name in our database, and she was indeed a JBS alum. I will definitely follow up after I get this issue to press.

I have included mention of Mrs. Edison at the end of the Audubon article. But I'd like to give Mrs. Newman a more active role, if it is appropriate. Would it be accurate to include the following in the second paragraph:

"Peck decided to give it one more try. He contacted Newman, who is a numismatic historian and scholar, and Newman—with the help of his wife of 70 years, Evelyn Edison Newman '37—started looking. They searched for grouse pictures. . ."

Following is the draft that includes your edits from yesterday (with a mention of Mrs. Newman at the end of the article). Let me know if I can change it as suggested above, or if you would rather I go in a different direction.

Thank you again.
Lynn

Newman's discovery rocks the world of Audubon scholars

Audubon scholars all over the world are pretty excited about the find of Eric P. Newman '28.

Newman has discovered an etching by bird artist and ornithologist John James Audubon. The discovery of the etching, which appears to be the artist's first engraved illustration, was made in collaboration with Audubon scholar, Robert Peck, who is curator of art and artifacts at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. The two spent about a decade hunting for the illustration that Audubon mentioned in an 1824 diary entry. Audubon wrote that he had given a drawing of a grouse to a Philadelphia engraver for use on a New Jersey banknote.

That reference and another a few years later convinced Audubon scholars of the existence of the illustration. But they were stumped. Where was it? Nobody could find it. Peck decided to give it one more try. He contacted Newman, who is a numismatic historian and scholar, and Newman started looking. He searched for grouse pictures, pouring over every book written on New Jersey paper money and checking thousands of banknotes issued in the United States. He didn't find any ... until he re-examined his own collection of bank note engravers' sample sheets, which are printed with various images that bank presidents might want on their bills. There, on a sheet issued by Fairman's firm, likely in 1825, was a grouse, a running grouse!

Mr. Newman, who turns 100 in May 2011, has been writing on the history of American money for 80 years. He has authored many articles and books on the topic, and his book on early American paper money is considered the standard in the field. He also has one of the finest private collections of U.S. and colonial American coins and paper money, and established and operates the Newman Money Museum in the Kemper Art Museum at Washington University in St. Louis.

Mr. Newman is also the man for whom the Newman Prize at Burroughs is named. The prize—which recognizes the qualities of exploration, courage and determination in a Burroughs student—honors Mr. Newman as a model of those qualities. The prize enables a Burroughs student to meet with a prominent American of his or her choice.

In the case of Mr. Newman, his curiosity and lifelong love of learning have led in interesting directions. "I was told that nobody had been able to find the Audubon illustration, and I was the one who got to find it!" he says. "Nobody is an expert on anything without digging in and learning about it. That is what my education at JBS did for me,"

Mr. Newman and his wife of 70 years, Evelyn Edison Newman '37, live in St. Louis.

[Quoted text hidden]

=

EricNumis@aol.com <EricNumis@aol.com>

Thu, Aug 26, 2010 at 2:17 PM

To: [REDACTED]

As a matter of humor I call your attention to some typos. The message I just received and am responding to is addressed to Mr. Edison (should I change my name to my wife's maiden surname because women are taking over the world). In the second paragraph Mrs. Edison is used (I am unaware that my wife changed back to her maiden name and then attempts to use Mrs. instead of Ms.).

The modification of the text of your proposed insert is just fine.

Thank you for finding Dorothy Lee Pelton as a JBS graduate..

All's well that ends well.

Eric

Fri, Aug 27, 2010 at 9:35 AM

To: ericnumis@aol.com

You probably would not believe that I proofed that e-mail several times! I had verified Mrs. Newman's maiden name in our database, and somehow that is the name that stuck in my brain. At least I was consistent.

I will insert the text as indicated (in red below), and I will be in contact with Mrs. Newman later this fall.

Regards.

Lynn

On Aug 26, 2010, at 1:17 PM, ericnumis@aol.com wrote:

As a matter of humor I call your attention to some typos. The message I I just received and am responding to is addressed to Mr. Edison (should I change my name to my wife's maiden surname because women are taking over the world). In the second paragraph Mrs. Edison is used (I am unaware that my wife changed back to her maiden name and then attempts to use Mrs. instead of Ms.).

The modification of the text of your proposed insert is just fine.

Thank you for finding Dorothy Lee Pelton as a JBS graduate..

All's well that ends well.

Eric

In a message dated 8/26/2010 10:18:11 A.M. Eastern Daylight Time, [REDACTED] writes:

Dear Mr. Edison:

I like the tie-in with the 50-year anniversary of the Scholarshop. I looked for Dorothy Lee Pelton's name in our database, and she was indeed a JBS alum. I will definitely follow up after I get this issue to press.

I have included mention of Mrs. Edison at the end of the Audubon article. But I'd like to give Mrs. Newman a more active role, if it is appropriate. Would it be accurate to include the following in the second paragraph:

"Peck decided to give it one more try. He contacted Newman, who is a numismatic historian and scholar, and Newman—with the help of his wife of 70 years, Evelyn Edison Newman '37—started looking. They searched for grouse pictures. . ."

Following is the draft that includes your edits from yesterday (with a mention of Mrs. Newman at the end of the article). Let me know if I can change it as suggested above, or if you would rather I go in a different direction.

Thank you again.
Lynn

Newman's discovery rocks the world of Audubon scholars

Audubon scholars all over the world are pretty excited about the find of Eric P. Newman '28.

Newman has discovered an etching by bird artist and ornithologist John James Audubon. The discovery of the etching, which appears to be the artist's first engraved illustration, was made in collaboration with Audubon scholar, Robert Peck, who is curator of art and artifacts at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. The two spent about a decade hunting for the illustration that Audubon mentioned in an 1824 diary entry. Audubon wrote that he had given a drawing of a grouse to a Philadelphia engraver for use on a New Jersey banknote.

That reference and another a few years later convinced Audubon scholars of the existence of the illustration. But they were stumped. Where was it? Nobody could find it. Peck decided to give it one more try.. He contacted Newman, who is a numismatic historian and scholar, and Newman started looking. He searched for grouse pictures, pouring over every book written on New Jersey paper money and checking thousands of banknotes issued in the United States. He didn't find any ... until he re-examined his own collection of bank note engravers' sample sheets, which are printed with various images that bank presidents might want on their bills. There, on a sheet issued by Fairman's firm, likely in 1825, was a grouse, a running grouse!

[Quoted text hidden]

[Quoted text hidden]

=

[Quoted text hidden]

=

Eric Newman <ericnumis106@gmail.com>

Interview for The John Burroughs World

1 message

[REDACTED]
to: ericnumis@aol.com

Fri, May 20, 2011 at 10:03 AM

Dear Mr. Newman

Greetings from the other Andrew Newman, the Fine Arts teacher at John Burroughs and the Sponsor of the World, the student newspaper. In advance of your birthday celebration which I hear is next week, the World would love to visit with you for an interview that would hopefully become an article in our next edition of the newspaper. Isabelle Stillman and Caroline Ludeman are our two student editors-in-chief and Eileen Williams, the current recipient of the Newman Prize, is one of our writers.

We know this is short notice, but would it be possible to set-up an interview this weekend, preferable this Sunday if I may be so bold to ask, so that Eileen or one of the Editors can chat with you about your memories of Burroughs and your remarkable life.

We would be most appreciative of your time and we think the student body would love to read in the World about your life and words of wisdom!

We are going to layout the paper this Monday night, May 23 and the paper will come out on Thursday, May 26th. If this weekend is too early to meet with you, but would be willing to meet with our staff at a later date, we could certainly include the article in a later issue of the World.

Thanks for considering it,

Andrew R. Newman

Please reply to this address: [REDACTED] or by phone 280-2749.

JBS / Eric P. Newman '28

1 message

Thu, Nov 16, 2017 at 4:03 PM

Reply-To: [REDACTED]
To: ericnumis@aol.com

If you'd like to view this email in a Web browser, please click here

Forward this mailing

November 16, 2017

Dear JBS Community,

As you may know, Eric P. Newman '28 passed away yesterday. At his death, he was 106 and our oldest living alum.

I leave it to others to pay tribute to Mr. Newman's business and legal acumen, his expertise as a numismatist and his commitment to St. Louis. It was his relationship with Burroughs that I know best.

Eric Newman was a student ~ one of 75 ~ on the opening day of Burroughs in October 1923. His exceptional connection to our school spanned more than nine decades. He was predeceased by his wife, Evelyn Edison Newman '37. Four generations of their family have attended JBS, including their great-grandson, Nick Booker, who is a senior. Eric Newman was a member of the Board of Trustees when his children, Linda Newman Schapiro '59 and Andy Newman '62, were students here, and he served on the school's Investment Committee for 33 years.

His last visit to campus was a year ago for the 25th anniversary of the Newman Prize. This annual award gives a member of the junior class the opportunity to meet with a famous American of his/her choice. It was named for Eric Newman because his "desire to explore everything, along with his passionate interests, timeless energy, and inquiring mind" modeled the characteristics the prize is intended to honor.

When we open our new STAR building next fall, Mr. Newman's presence will still be felt. The auditorium has already been named in his honor in gratitude for all that he has done for our school.

Yesterday, Burroughs lost a little bit of its heart.

Sincerely,

Andy Abbott
Head of School

On October 28, 2016, Eric Newman and 12 Newman Prize recipients attended an assembly in recognition of the prize's 25th anniversary.

755 S. Price Road; St. Louis, MO 63124 (314)993-4040

www.jburroughs.org

To learn why you received this and how to remove yourself from the list, see Privacy & Permissions Policy
Review / edit information about you || Unsubscribe